

THE HALE FAMILY PAPERS

The Hale Family Papers contain 823 items in three boxes, and cover the years 1692-1906. Box I (115 items) contains the papers of various members of the Hale family, and covers the years 1692 to 1906. Box II (380 items) and Box III (328 items) contain the correspondence of William Hale (1765-1848) of Portsmouth and Dover, and covers the years 1790 to 1839. A geneological note must be added here. The Hale family in this collection are descendants of Robert Hale, who immigrated to America between 1630 and 1632. Hence, there are no papers of Salma Hale of Keene in this collection, since he was of a totally different family. The Hale Family Papers are largely a permanent gift from Mr. and Mrs. Jas. C. Sawyer of Durham, N.H. in March 1941. The Sawyers also gave the correspondence known as the Hale Commercial Papers, but not the three letter books of William and Samuel Hale. Some of the Hale Family Papers were a gift of Martha Hale Shackford of Wellesley, Mass. in July 1954.

What follows is a biographic sketch of the major figure in the Hale Family Papers, William Hale. In order to better understand the collection, this will be followed by two geneological charts showing the various members of the Hale family. This in turn will be followed by an inventory of the Hale Family Papers, including a list of card headings filed in the Mss. Room Name and Subject card index file.

William Hale (1765-1848)

William Hale was born on August 6, 1765 in Portsmouth, N.H., the fourth son and seventh child of Maj. Samuel (1718-1807) and Mary Wright Hale (d. 1807). Major Samuel Hale was a Harvard graduate (1740), earned his commission as a result of his actions at the capture of Louisburg, and for years was schoolmaster in Portsmouth. William was educated in the Portsmouth public schools, but rather than go to college, William became a merchant with his older brother Samuel (1758-1828). While the firm of Samuel & William Hale remained in ^{Dover} Portsmouth, Samuel and William Hale did not. Samuel took up residence in Barrington and William in Dover.

While Samuel Hale became politically influential at the local level, William Hale became a major political figure in the state. He first became a state Senator in 1796, and served in that capacity through the next four years. He was a member of the Governor's Council from 1803 to 1805. He was later elected to the U. S. House of Representatives and sat in the Eleventh Congress (1809-1811). Washington climate did not agree with him, however, and he became quite ill near the end of his term. He did not serve during the Twelfth Congress, but returned to serve in the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Congresses (1813-1817). An active Federalist, Hale was very much involved in the peace movement during the War of 1812, and placed great hopes in the outcome of the Hartford Convention.

Hale retired to private life in 1817. The firm of Samuel and William Hale seems to have done well over the years. William invested much of his money in real estate throughout New Hampshire, particularly in the towns of Tamworth, Orford, and Piermont. Even though national and state politics were now behind him, Hale became active in a number of local interests. He was a shareholder in the Cocheco Manufacturing Co., a Director of the Dover Unitarian Society, a President of the Strafford County Agricultural Society, a member of the board of directors of both the Gilmanton and Berwick Academies, along with several other positions.

Nor did his family life leave him with much free time. He and his wife Lydia Rollins Hale (d. 1841) had ten children, six of whom lived to maturity. As William became the acknowledged head of his father's large family, he became involved in the welfare of numerous nieces and nephews. He was usually the first one consulted concerning the family's extensive land holdings throughout the state as well. In short, William Hale's retirement from politics was largely the result of his growing private interests which demanded more and more of his time. This active private life seems to have continued until his death on November 8, 1848 in Dover--although his papers stop in 1839, shortly before the death of his wife.
